

VIRTUAL

Origin & Legacy of Military Nurse Scientists

A Virtual Science Café by TriService Nursing Research Program

Thursday, May 9 at 11 a.m. – @MedicalMuseum on Facebook

Military nursing research provides an important tool for health care professionals to maintain a readiness focus, provide care, and develop and maintain clinical skills relevant to both the military and civilian health care communities. Join the TriService Nursing Research Program as they discuss the history and origins of military nursing research and interview military nurse scientists about current and past research projects that range from the development of competency training programs to clinical reference guides.
